State Law Report Card

New Hampshire

A protection order is a FREE court order that can protect you from an abusive dating partner. This order can prevent your current or ex-partner from:

- Threatening or abusing you
- Contacting or coming near you or your family
- Coming to your school, home or work
- Possessing a gun

The order may also require your current or ex-partner to:

- Move out of your home
- Agree to a custody and visitation schedule, if you have children
- Give you use of shared personal property
- Pay you child support or spousal support
- Participate in counseling or a batterer's intervention program
- Pay your attorney's fees or pay for other harm you suffered
- Do anything else the court finds is necessary for your protection

A protection order can be changed if things in your life change (for example, if you transfer to a new school or get a new job).

You can get a protection order against someone who:

- You are/were dating, living with or married to OR
- You have a child with OR
- You are related to by blood or marriage

The law requires you to show that your current or ex-partner:

- Threatened to, attempted to or actually physically abused you OR
- Sexually abused you OR
- Stalked or harassed you OR
- Destroyed your property

Other types of abuse may also qualify you for a protection order.

New Hampshire law allows you to file for a protection order on your own behalf, regardless of your age. The law does not say who else may file for you or whether the court has to notify your parent/guardian if you receive a protection order.

This is the law in your state only. The law is different in every state.

What other laws do you need to know about?

All teens can consent to:

- Testing and treatment for sexually transmitted infections*
- Adoption

*You must be 14 or older.

If you are a minor, the court may require your parent's consent.

Some minors can access birth control services and medical care during pregnancy.

What are schools doing about dating violence?

New Hampshire law does not include information about dating violence in schools.

How can New Hampshire improve its response to teen dating violence?

• State the age at which a minor may file for a protection order without parental involvement.

• Allow all minors to access health services without parental involvement.

• Require schools to include dating violence education in health classes in all middle schools and high schools.
